PREFACE

FOR nearly three hundred years it has been stated, periodically, that the Theatre is "dying."

The Grand Old Invalid, however, is still hale and hearty, and if we have no giants to-day to command attention, such as Garrick, Kean, Siddons, Phelps, or Irving, the vitality of the Theatre generally need not be questioned.

There is a greater production of new plays to-day than ever before, and each year new dramatists, actors and actresses of undoubted talent are discovered, regularly making their mark.

The "life" of the Theatre is reflected in the present issue of Who's Who in the Theatre, for whereas the first edition contained fewer than a thousand biographies occupying 612 pages, the present edition contains well over two thousand five hundred, which cover no fewer than 1402 pages. The present volume contains 2012 pages in all, against 775 in 1912.

So many generous critics have described this book as indispensable that the periodical revision of Who's Who in the Theatre has assumed the shape of a duty. However, the kindness of the reception accorded to each new edition adds pleasure to the task, so that the labour is far from being without reward.

Next year, a quarter-of-a-century will have passed since Who's Who in the Theatre was first issued. From the commencement the book has been regarded generally as the most reliable work of its kind, and it only remains for me to add my earnest hope—and belief—that the reputation for accuracy and comprehensiveness which previous editions have earned will be well maintained by the 1936 Edition. More than four hundred new biographies have been added since the last issue.

Death has, however, laid a heavy hand on the theatrical profession during the past three years and for this reason alone over one hundred and twenty biographies have disappeared. Many famous names are gone, Sir Gerald du Maurier, Marie Dressler, J. T. Grein, George Grossmith, De Wolf Hopper, Dame Madge Kendal, Robert Loraine, Sir Nigel Playfair, Sir Arthur Pinero, Arthur Roberts, Will Rogers, E. H. Sothorn, Fred Terry, Augustus Thomas, and many others.

Notices relating to numerous actors and actresses who have not appeared ~~on the stage during~~ the past few years have also been removed, and these number some 170. These names, however, are retained for reference.

Everything possible has been done to test the accuracy of the facts recorded, and although in a work dealing with so many thousands of names and dates mistakes are bound to occur, it is confidently believed that these are exceedingly few.

Proofs of the biographies have again been submitted to all for whom an address could be found, and the response has again been most gratifying.

With so many actors, actresses and producers now directing their talents towards the medium of the "talking pictures," the work of compilation has been increased very considerably, but due attention has been paid to the film activities of those concerned. Such a vast number of film productions are released nowadays, however, that it is quite impossible to keep pace with them in a work such as this. It will be found, however, that nearly everything of consequence has been taken into account up to the end of 1935. This portion of the work has again been compiled by my son, John, and, as on the last occasion, I venture to think he has carried it out in a most efficient manner. He has also helped extensively in the reading of proofs.

The biographical records have been brought down, generally, to about the middle of November, although in numerous instances later references will be found; the Synopsis of Playbills brings the London record down to the end of the year. On the last occasion the index to these Playbills proved to be exceedingly useful and it is therefore repeated in the present edition.

I have to acknowledge, with gratitude, the continued assistance afforded me by Mr. Garrison P. Sherwood, of New York, by Mr. Paul Dulzell, Secretary of Actors' Equity Association of America; by Mrs. Gabrielle Enthoven, whose collection of playbills has again enabled me to trace many early appearances, and by Dr. J. M. Bulloch, who has again revised his famous Genealogical Tables, which remain, as ever, one of the most interesting features of this work. Dr. Bulloch has also contributed a new feature, "Actresses and the Peerage."

JOHN PARKER.
